Excerpt: . . . ILL-USED MEN. T AMENTING the fact that I had not the privilege of arranging the Lectures of this Institute myself, 1 will express a hope, at the outset of my discourse, that you will sympathise with me in the difficult task of reconciling the public mind, after it has been for two successive weeks devoted to the gorilla, to the consideration of mere men and women--ill-used men. I have some boldness in asking of you this boon, because I doubt not that most among you consider yourselves as ill-used men, but at the same time I candidly state my belief that however many of you may have been badly treated, the greater number, if you put it honestly to your consciences, will find that you have received far more good than you have ever deserved, and have been treated much better than you could...
