The quinine spray is frequently recommended, this is made by dissolving one grain of quinine in an ounce and a half of water; before using the solution it is to be heated to 100 F. Recently it has been claimed that lithaemia is a strong predisposing cause of hay-fever, and that gratifying results follow a fifteen grain dose of salicylate of soda, taken before breakfast. Naphthaline, protoiodide of mercury, hamamelis, or belladonna ointment freely applied to the nostrils are claimed to be beneficial; favorable results have been credited to the use of hydriodic acid syrup; a pill of atropia sulphate containing the two-hundredth of a grain given every three or four hours, until its physiological effect is produced (manifested by dryness in the throat and nose), will lessen an attack. Amelioration will occasionally follow inhalation of the compound tincture of benzoin,...
